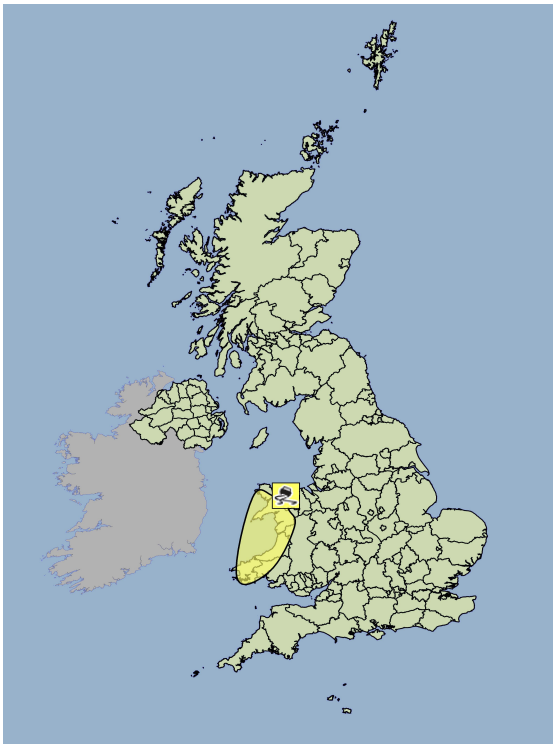
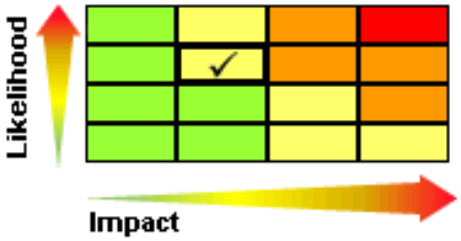
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Showers have turned quite heavy in northwest Wales already, and will continue to spread south this morning although further south they will be rather more hit and miss. Temperatures have fallen well below freezing overnight, hence the risk of ice. Conditions should improve later this morning as temperatures creep up and showers begin to move offshore.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 08:15 on Mon, 02nd Feb 2015 until 11:00 on Mon, 02nd Feb 2015

Showers, falling as rain or sleet near coasts but as snow inland, will continue this morning in parts of west Wales. They will fall on to cold surfaces, bringing the risk of ice, while in some areas, especially Snowdonia, snow showers may leave a localised cover of up to a few cm.

The public should be aware of the risk of hazardous driving conditions.
